Investment Manager's Comment

May was a brutal month for our strategy focused on quality stocks. However, the widespread sell-off in stocks with stable free cash flows and high returns on equity opened up the opportunity for us to buy three more steadily growing companies at very good prices: the software companies Jack Henry and ServiceNow, and the data provider Thomson Reuters. To raise funds for these new purchases, we sold less attractive stocks such as Kühne+Nagel, HP, Icon, and our two half positions in Gregg's and B+M Value Retail. This further improved the average quality of the portfolio.
